

Biography of YONGJUN CHO

YONGJUN CHO is currently the Executive Director of Bridging the Digital Divide in the Korea Agency for Digital Opportunity & Promotion (KADO, www.kado.or.kr).

Before joining the KADO, He was Executive Reporter as well as Chief Editor in Weekly DongA (DongA, www.donga.com) which is one of 3 major newspaper companies in Korea. In 2004, he moved to the KADO and worked as Executive Director at Public Relations and Media Team from 2004 to early 2008. During the period, he presses digital divide issues and articles to mass media, also design and managed big major conferences every year such as Information Culture Month Ceremony which was driven by Ministry of Information and Communication, Korea. Since early 2008, he has been participating in designing and implementing Korea IT Learning Program (www.kado.or.kr/koil) which is one of Korean bridging the international digital divide projects. KOIL Program is an outstanding training program in ICT and telecommunication to share Korea ICT development experience and know-how with women and men who are responsible for ICT policy and communications infrastructures throughout the developing world. He earned Master of Arts in English Literature in Kyunghee University, Seoul, Korea.